

allure

Young Patients Are Getting Plastic Surgery to Depuff Their Undereyes

Featuring Dr. Adam R. Kolker

By Kara Nesvig

allure

“This is not your mother’s blepharoplasty.”

Adam Kolker, MD, a board-certified plastic surgeon in New York City.

allure

So maybe it’s not so surprising that surgeons have noticed an increased “shifting away from short-lived injectable Band-Aids,” says Dr. Kolker.

A 33-year-old patient before and after lower blepharoplasty performed by Dr. Kolker. Courtesy of Dr. Kolker.

allure

Ten years ago, it was rare to see someone in their 30s inquiring about a lower blepharoplasty, but in the past few years, it’s become “incredibly common,” says Dr. Kolker.

A 24-year-old patient before and after lower blepharoplasty performed by Adam Kolker, MD, a board-certified plastic surgeon in New York City. Courtesy of Dr. Kolker.